Systemic functional grammar (SFG) is a form of grammatical description originated by Michael Halliday. It is part of a social semiotic approach to language called systemic functional linguistics. In these two terms, systemic refers to the view of language as "a network of systems, or interrelated sets of options for making meaning"; functional refers to Halliday's view that language is as it is ...

Hi, Article rules are very complex, so I don't blame you for having problems with them. If we are talking in general, we can say 'The dolphin is an intelligent animal' or we can say 'A dolphin is an intelligent animal' or we can say 'Dolphins are intelligent animals'. Confusing! For me, the difference is that the focus in the first is on an abstract example, on the second the focus is on an ...

Definition. Generally (but not always) pronouns stand for (pro + noun) or refer to a noun, an individual or individuals or thing or things (the pronoun's antecedent) whose identity is made clear earlier in the text. For instance, we are bewildered by writers who claim something like. They say that eating beef is bad for you.

SO THAT — PURPOSE; An action/plan may be followed by so that + a clause that expresses purpose or goal. The clause after so usually includes a modal, such as can, could, will, would, may or might, all of which express general timing. The time of the purpose is usually (but not always) later than the time when one makes the plan.
