Best Answer: There are a few ways to go with these and not knowing the subject matter you are studying I may be speaking a different language! But: I would substitute  $x = 10^y$  into the expression This gives you:  $\log_5(10^y) - \log_7(10^y) = 4$  (rearranged). now by the rules of logs,  $y \cdot \log_5(10) - y \cdot \log_7(10) = 4$  or ...

GRAPHING LOGARITHMIC FUNCTIONS WORKSHEET Transformations of Logarithmic Functions:  $y = a \log_k(b(x-h)+k)$ , where  $a$  is the vertical stretch or shrink,  $h$  is the horizontal translation and  $k$  is the vertical translation. The parent graph  $y = \log_b x$  passes through the points  $(1, 0)$  and  $(b, 1)$  and has a vertical asymptote at  $x = 0$ .

Graphing Logarithmic Functions Worksheet - RPD

If you check this in your calculator, first, remember to put the " $x + 3$ " inside parentheses, or your calculator will think you mean " $\log_2(x) + 3$ ", and you'll get the wrong answer; second, remember that your calculator can only follow its programming — it can't think — so the graph it displays will likely be incorrect, even if you enter the function correctly.

Graphing Logarithmic Functions: More Examples

Common Logarithms: Base 10. Sometimes a logarithm is written without a base, like this:  $\log(100)$  This usually means that the base is really 10. It is called a "common logarithm". Engineers love to use it. On a calculator it is the "log" button. It is how many times we need to use 10 in a multiplication, to get our desired number.
