Hi, Article rules are very complex, so I don't blame you for having problems with them. If we are talking in general, we can say 'The dolphin is an intelligent animal' or we can say 'A dolphin is an intelligent animal' or we can say 'Dolphins are intelligent animals'. Confusing! For me, the difference is that the focus in the first is on an abstract example, on the second the focus is on an ...

Group decision-making (also known as collaborative decision-making) is a situation faced when individuals collectively make a choice from the alternatives before them. The decision is then no longer attributable to any single individual who is a member of the group. This is because all the individuals and social group processes such as social influence contribute to the outcome.

According to me, in my country, Bangladesh, there are some etiquettes similar to Britain and a few are not. Like the classes of people are judged at the dining table. We think that if anyone eats with spoons, they are upper classes and those who use their hands while eating are considered as lower classes people. Most people of our country show respect, thank, say sorry to those who are upper classes.
