5G is the communication standard of the future and is expected to be introduced from 2020. It connects not only people, but also a vast number of sensors. By doing so, 5G paves the way for the Internet of Things. Cars, heating systems and even trash cans are becoming involved in the net, posing completely different challenges than flesh-and-blood network users.

Mobile data offloading is the use of complementary network technologies for delivering data originally targeted for cellular networks. Offloading reduces the amount of data being carried on the cellular bands, freeing bandwidth for other users. It is also used in situations where local cell reception may be poor, allowing the user to connect via wired services with better connectivity.
